The hippest hipster in town

For Vince Vaughn, overnight success has been a long time coming. Yet he's now being hailed as the coolest thing to hit Hollywood since James Dean.

Although it was the 1996 surprise smash film Swingers about LA nightlife, that really put him on the map, Vaughn had been making the Tinseltown rounds for years.

Born on 28 March 1970, he grew up in the Minnesota and Illinois heartlands. It was only after trying his hand at comedy improvisation in Chicago that the idea of acting occurred to him. He clinched a major tv commercial in 1989 then told his family, 'I'm not going to college, I'm going to LA!'

However once there, he soon realized that instant fame was just another Hollywood illusion, and was consigned to a series of forgettable tv cameos. When his big-screen debut finally came in the 1993 American football drama Rudy, he was devastated to find that most of his scenes were cut and he wasn't even invited to the premiere!

But, when fellow Rudy cast member Jon Favreau started to write the low-budget Swingers, he remembered Vaughn. And the rest, as they say, is history.

Dubbed the Prince Of The Cocktail Nation, his intoxicating mix of suave good looks and magnetic screen presence was soon spotted by Steven Spielberg, who cast Vaughn in his Jurassic Park sequel, The Lost World.

Now Vaughn's very hot with lots of film projects coming his way. He'll be a serial killer in Clay Pigeons, a struggling young lawyer in A Cool, Dry Place and Anne Heche's leading man in Force Majeure. He will also reunite with Favreau to co-write, co-direct and co-star in a new western, tentatively-titled The Marshal Of Revelation.

Gary Oldman in The Fifth Element

Enough of being tough

If you're one of the many moviegoers who love to hate Gary Oldman (True Romance 1993, The Fifth Element 1997, Air Force One 1997) then make sure you see him in the latest tv series-to-movie epic, Lost In Space, as this might be his last screen outing as a villain!

He stars alongside William Hurt (Broadcast News 1987, Michael 1996) and Matt Le Blanc (tv's Friends) as the smarmy scheming Dr Zachary Smith. In the film, Oldman oozes cowardly charm, but he says he's now had enough of being bad.

'There's just so many baddies I can play,' he says. 'Where can I go now? I've really neglected my acting, and let my career slip a bit. So, I'm going to cork the genie!'

Playing tag

What the marketing department came up with to promote the film...

- The Scream You Hear May Be Your Own! (Play Misty For Me 1971)
- In 2033, Justice Rides A Tank And Wears Lip Gloss! (Tank Girl 1994)

- The Picture Made Behind Locked Doors (Dr Cyclops 1940)
- You Can See By The Cast... It's Important! Gripping! Big! (Casablanca 1942)
- Don't Give Away The Ending - It's The Only One We Have! (Psycho 1960)

On the cards

- Ewan McGregor is polishing up his Irish accent and is set to play legendary author James Joyce in the upcoming film Nora.
- Dan Aykroyd looks set to team up with director Harold Ramis for a third Ghostbusters comedy, but Bill Murray will be spookily absent from the proceedings!
- Leonardo DiCaprio is said to be fed up with all the attention he's getting and is heading off to India for a year to work with the poor and needy! Let's hope Titanic wasn't a hit over there!
- Helena Bonham-Carter and Kenneth Branagh appear to be building their careers around each other. The couple just completed Theory Of Flight together and are moving on to Alien Love Triangle wherein Branagh plays a man who discovers his wife (Bonham-Carter) is a male from another planet!

Chow Yun-Fat in The Replacement Killers

Feature movies

The Replacement Killers

Channel 5

To woo or not to woo, that was the question seemingly posed by Antoine Fuqua in his directorial debut, The Replacement Killers. His fast-moving action film pays homage to the balletic gun choreography of John Woo's movies. In fact, the great man himself oversees the film as executive producer.

The opening pulls viewers into an ambiguous Chinatown, so murky and non-descript that it could be located virtually in any major city. John Lee, played by the charismatic Asian film veteran, Chow Yun-Fat, is a slick assassin – so smooth and fearless it hurts – who appears at first to be a cold, calculating killer. However, the real villain soon emerges as the powerful Mr Wei, who has his enemies dealt with in traditional gangster fashion.

When Wei threatens the safety of Lee's family in exchange for a murderous assignment, Lee is faced with a moral dilemma: the destruction of another man's family to free his own. He goes on the run, becoming a target for Wei's army of killers. Along the way, he enlists the help of document forger Meg Coburn, played by Academy Award-winner Mira Sorvino (Mighty Aphrodite 1995).

The juxtaposition of East and West is mirrored by the chemistry between Lee and Coburn, giving the plot a good mix of the familiar and the original. Although the story is told through a series of gun battles, the film is not concerned primarily with violence, but rather the courage required to live by your convictions. Abigail Blackburn

The Boxer

Channel 1

Director Jim Sheridan and frequent collaborator Daniel Day-Lewis put on their gloves and get into the ring to tell this story of political unrest in Ireland. Day-Lewis plays Danny Flynn, a paramilitary member imprisoned for 14 years for his IRA activities. Once released, he pushes the past out of his mind and concentrates his efforts into his long-time love of boxing, and sets up a club with former coach Ike Weir (Ken Scott). This film is a powerful and intelligent drama so abundant in tension that it will grip you from beginning to end – a quality that Sheridan managed successfully in his last film, In The Name Of The Father (1993). The film also dedicates a majority of its running time to the relationship between Flynn and his former girlfriend, Maggie (Emily Woolf), whose father is the head of the IRA. This inevitably pulls Flynn into a spiral of political disruption. Strong performances by all involved, but it is Day-Lewis that pulls the best punches, convincingly portraying his character's frustration and affliction. Some of the realism probably comes from his spending three years in training with Irish boxing champion Barry McGuigan. It's about time we saw a film which differs from the usual Hollywood glitz. Hugh Ip

The animated city of Baghdad in Arabian Knight

Young explorer

Arabian Knight

Channel 10

This feature-length animated adventure is truly a film of obsessions, starting with its characters; Tack (voice: Matthew Broderick) the cobbler is obsessed with cobbling, Princes Yum Yum (voice: Jennifer Beals) is obsessed with Tack, the Grand Vizier (voice: Vincent Price) with taking over the palace and the Thief with stealing anything and everything. But the one true obsessive has to be the award-winning animator Richard Williams (Who Framed Roger Rabbit 1988), who worked on and off for 30 years to bring this masterpiece to the screen.

The final release is a somewhat shortened version of the original. Some characters have been cut, and more dialogue and songs have been added to update the film. However, what remains is a piece of fantastic animation, with characters who would have looked at home in The Beatles' Yellow Submarine (1968). The chase between Tack and the Thief is a spectacular feat of animation. They race across a tiled floor and up spiral staircases, creating Escher-like optical illusions. The final sequence, where a giant war machine threatens the palace, sees the Thief throw a serious spanner in the works, namely himself. He is tossed from cog to cog, cannon to cannon and back again, until the whole mechanism comes crashing down around him. He is by far the most humorous character, delivering witty one-liners, as he slinks across the screen in search of anything removable. Despite its repackaging and revisions, Arabian Knight still remains a highly entertaining animated story, which was clearly a labour of love, created by one of the most innovative animation artists of our time. Dawn Freeman

ONE TOUCH Com

A MOBILE MULTI-PURPOSE ASSISTANT FOR PEOPLE ON THE MOVE

Alcatel's new One Touch COM™ combines the most advanced digital cellular technology with the latest Personal Information Management and Internet e-mail access into an incredibly powerful, multi-purpose Smart Phone that fits right in your pocket.

Weighing less than 240g, with a large 80mm x 40mm back-lit screen, the One Touch COM™ is a light and compact business aide offering up to 4 hours talk time and 45 hours of standby operation.

It's a mobile phone...

To begin with the One Touch COM™ is a sophisticated yet user friendly mobile phone. Using the stylus pen, you can add names and addresses, send and receive messages with the Short Message Service (SMS) or access your Internet e-mail account from anywhere.

...a personal organiser...

The One Touch COM™ will manage your agenda, serve as an address book, calendar, world clock, calculator and note pad that allows handwritten notes and drawings. Messages (SMS) sent in a specific format automatically update your agenda with new appointments or other changes. So no matter where you are, you can be sure that your agenda is perfectly coordinated with your secretary's appointment calendar.

...an Internet/E-mail tool...

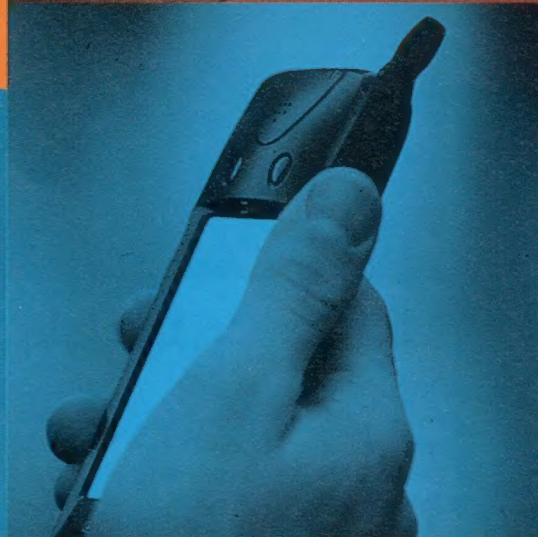

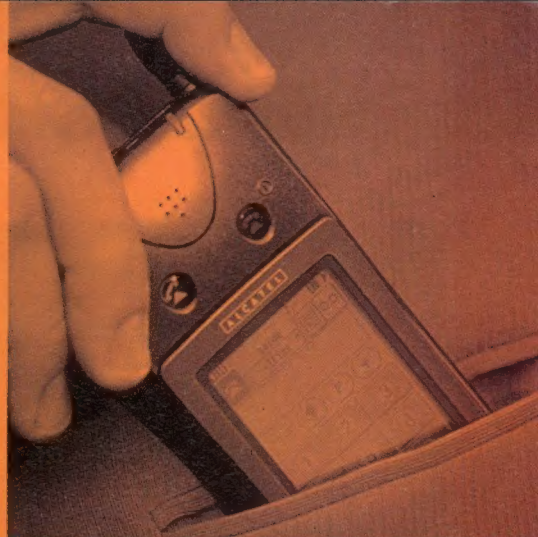

Simply use the stylus pen to access your e-mail wherever you are. A built-in programmable selection of message forms with pre-defined content makes sending messages even easier. Just touch and select the form you need, complete your message and send.

...a PC companion

Synchronising data such as appointments, names and addresses on your One Touch COM™ with that already in your PC is a simple task that requires only one touch. The One Touch COM™ is programmed to link with all Personal Information Management software applications such as Microsoft Outlook.

Once you've discovered the power in your hands with the One Touch COM™, you won't ever want to put it down.

Dancing on the isle

This month offers a unique opportunity to see local culture first-hand at the Bali Arts Festival. There are cultural shows, traditional arts demonstrations and craft exhibitions which bring together the best in dance and music from Indonesia and Bali. Expect to see classical dances of the island such as the legong, gambuh and kecak, as well as new dance choreography. But get there early as the opening parade is supposed to be particularly spectacular with more than 40 ensembles of musicians.

The Royal Ascot is a prime opportunity to see how the upper two per cent live and to show that you too have style. This famous horse race is held every year in Berkshire, England (about 25 miles west of London). It was immortalized in the film My Fair

Lady, and is still well known for the fashions — especially the hats — of those who attend. In a magnificent procession, Queen Elizabeth and other members of the British Royal Family arrive from Windsor Castle each day in open carriages and drive down the course at 2pm before the first race begins.

Up in flames

Fireworks in themselves are a spectacular sight. But synchronize these mini-explosions to music and that's entertainment!

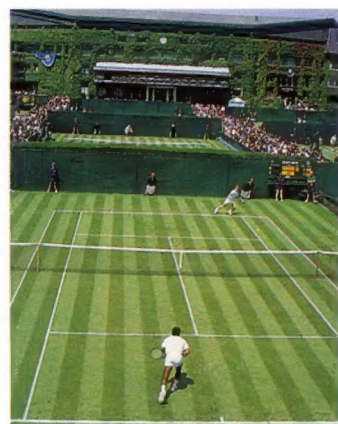

For over a month, the night skies over Montreal will be alight and filled with music during the annual Benson & Hedges Symphony Of Fire, which is considered the most important fireworks competition in the world. This year competitors from all over the world including Italy, Austria, and China will be unveiling the latest pyromusical techniques.

Taking it to court

It's time for the all-grass courts of the Wimbledon Lawn Tennis Championships. Will four-time Wimbledon winner Pete Sampras finally be undone? And what about Martina Hingis, who last year became the youngest singles champion? Tickets are available from the turnstiles on each match day except the last four days of the tournament. Waiting outside in those lines can be almost as much fun as watching the tennis taking place on the courts!

Nightless days

For those wanting to go all-night-long, Finland's the place to be, because at this time of year the sun shines as brightly at 3am as it does at noon.

During the Midnight Sun Film Festival, movies are showing 24 hours a day and include classic works, new releases and silent movies with live music. The setting is very informal and has even been called the 'Anti-Cannes'.

For serene music, there's a varied programme going on at the Naantali Music Festival this year. In addition to the top-quality concerts, the Norwegian Radio Orchestra and the Franz Liszt Chamber Orchestra will be putting in appearances. And for those who want to learn something while on holiday, premier musicians are conducting master classes at the festival music camp.

If you just want to boogie, the Kuopio Dance Festival has a Latin American theme this year. And you know what that means — Brazilian rhythms, tangos and... the samba! Plus, there's classical ballet performances as well as an exhibition of dance photography. And if you need a rest, have a kalakukko (traditional fish baked in rye bread) and see this beautiful city which is surrounded by thousands of lakes, islands and forests.

It happened in June

● It's 1956 and the US is shaken by the impact of the new popular music, rock'n'roll, as the young Mr Presley gyrates his hips live on tv. The solution? Henceforth only show Elvis from the waist up when he appears on the box.

● Canadian singer-songwriter Alanis Morissette, whose debut album Jagged Little Pill has been one of the worldwide sensations of the 1990s, selling in excess of 20 million records, was born this month in 1974.

● US music sells across the world but America rarely embraces the music of other cultures. Kyu Sakamoto was, then, rather fortunate to be the first-ever Japanese artist to top the US charts with Sukiyaki in 1963.

Move on up

911's voyage into sound began, appropriately, with The Journey. The trio were determined to take their unashamed pop to the world, literally. Not contented to sit at home and wait, the group set out to convert the globe – especially South East Asia – through gigs, television, and radio. Having managed to escape the hoards of teenage girls unscathed, stardom was theirs with gold and platinum discs in Singapore, Thailand, the Philippines and Taiwan. In Malaysia, the band members were so popular they even outsold their hero Michael Jackson. Only a year later and things have changed, as the title to the new album, Moving On, alludes. It may be a more mature record, highlighting the group's pop and R&B influences, but, rest assured, seductive vocals and catchy tunes are still the priority.

Melting Pop

As sallaa mu alai kum. This Muslim greeting begins performances in the Dikir Barat tradition. And it was when US ex-patriate Mashor Letts first heard this Malay vocal-percussion form that the seeds were sown for the group Transformasi and the opening of their album My Lucky Charm. 'I realized there was no more positive way to begin a live performance,' he recalls. 'Or an album for that matter – it may seem naïve but I think peace is a real good idea.'

What's up

Dance music moves so fast these days and not just in terms of beats per minute. New genres emerge, mutate, thrive and die every week. One example – big beat – has pretty much established itself at an underground level and is about to really take off, especially since the independent label, Skint Records, that is home to the cream of big beat, has joined forces with music giant Sony. Their first joint release is the Lo Fidelity Allstars album, How To Operate With A Blown Mind, which combines the heavy crossbeats and acid synths that are the genre's trademark, with remarkably downtempo, melancholic and wistful tracks. It's varied, innovative, has very uncompromising lyrics and is like nothing you've ever heard. Equally fresh and even more lo-fidelity are a group from Belgium, The Evil Superstars. Chunky, funky beats, distorted guitar and short, sharp songs, but there's pop underlying their alternative sensibilities. Their debut album, Boogie Children R-Us, is out this month. Current kings of alternative are probably the Smashing Pumpkins whose new, more low-key, album, Adore, is described by leader Billy Corgan as 'arcane night music'. If you want reliable ballads then pick up some of the newly-remastered Elton John albums which include Too Low For Zero and Reg Strikes Back. As famous for her on-stage wear as Elton is Sammi Cheng who's been touring and showing the US what she's made of. She's now recording a new Cantonese album due for a summer-time release.

Kylie Minogue has come a long way since her days in the tv show Neighbours. Taking advice from some colourful characters in the music world such as Nick Cave, Bono and Tricky, the transformation of Kylie has made for interesting listening. Her new, self-titled album includes contributions from James Dean Bradfield of The Manic Street Preachers and The Grid's David Ball. Does this herald the birth of an indie phase for her? She says, 'Pop seems to hold so many different aspects these days. I still consider myself pop. Pop, but with harder edges.'

Music for a new age

Channel 4

One of the biggest exponents of new age music is Greek composer Yanni. He is phenomenally successful, having sold over 16 million albums worldwide, with 31 of those going platinum. The secret of his success? Well, he's been described as having the profile of a Greek god and a ruthlessly inquiring mind like Socrates. Who could argue with that?

Story behind the songs

Channel 9

Some of the best songs have the most unlikely sources. In 1973 soul singer Roberta Flack hit the number one spot with the ballad Killing Me Softly With His Song. Originally written as a tribute to Don McLean, Flack decided to cover the track, and spent three months in the studio perfecting it. Quarter To Three was a major hit for Gary US Bonds in 1961. A year later, Bonds accused Chubby Checker of plagiarizing it on Checker's song Dancin' Party. The case was settled out of court to the tune of US$100,000.

In 1963, just after the release of Little Town Flirt, Del Shannon toured the UK. A great fan of the British music scene, he suggested to The Beatles that he record one of their songs in order to raise the band's profile in the States. Shannon's cover of From Me To You bombed at number 77 in the US.

Channel 6

It's 20 years since John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John burst onto our cinema screens as the stars of the teenage angst and love story, Grease. The original musical came from humble beginnings, starting life as a five-hour amateur production in Chicago. Later, a much-edited version hit Broadway and remained there until 1980. The London production opened in 1973 and starred the then unknown Richard Gere as greaser Danny Zuko. Elaine Paige was also in the company as an understudy, and eventually took over the role of Sandy. But, it is the film version which most people remember and will probably remain the one that we want.

This experience was considerably more comfortable than recording his debut album in the 1960s – just as production was completed, his producer disappeared to the deserts of New Mexico, taking the master tapes with him! Undeterred, Callier recorded three more albums. He then vacated the music scene, and worked as a computer programmer in his hometown of Chicago. His resurrection as a jazz musician has won him a completely new fan base and he's once again one of the hippest names in jazz vocals.

It's 1660, King Louis XIII, who the Musketeers once served, has died and France is starving under the cruel and arrogant heir, King Louis XIV (Leonardo DiCaprio). Aramis (Jeremy Irons), Athos (John Malkovich) and Porthos (Gerard Depardieu) have put away their swords and now live peacefully. Only their comrade d'Artagnan (Gabriel Byrne) stayed on to serve the new King. As France crumbles and rumours of a mysterious masked prisoner reach the Musketeers, the heroic trio decide it's time for action. They reunite for a final adventure to save France and discover the mystery of the man in the iron mask.

Behind the mask

Leonardo DiCaprio is the reason for all those lovelorn sighs in movie theatres these days, especially for his performance in Titanic. His latest, the Musketeer film The Man In The Iron Mask, has him playing dual roles and must have worn him out because he's decided to take a rest from film-making. Is it because of all the swashbuckling action?
By Dawn Freeman

At just 23 years old, Leonardo DiCaprio is seriously hot stuff. Everyone wants a piece of him – some more literally than others – and these days, his name on a cast list almost guarantees a movie's success.

What started with William Shakespeare's Romeo And Juliet (1997) seems to have erupted with Titanic, which took him straight to the top of the Hollywood A-list. Yet it's sometimes overlooked that he's been in the industry since he was just 14, and earned both Oscar and Golden Globe nominations in 1993 for his role in What's Eating Gilbert Grape? However, the recent global attention, the non-stop movie-making, press calls, and premieres have DiCaprio wanting to take a break. I guess he can afford it!

After spending nearly six months knee-deep in water filming Titanic, DiCaprio went straight into The Man In The Iron Mask. With swashbuckling action and acting heavyweights John Malkovich, Gerard Depardieu, Jeremy Irons and Gabriel Byrne, the film looked too good to turn down. Yet it must have seemed rather daunting for young DiCaprio to work with these established actors. He admits, 'I was expecting the worst, because you have all these world-class actors who have been nominated for Oscars and are all highly acclaimed... But as soon as we got there, it was a totally relaxed environment, which I didn't expect. All of them just joke around constantly like schoolboys.'

The villain and the hero

Even so, this film took some serious acting. Seasoned performer Byrne, who played the Musketeers' comrade d'Artagnan, somewhat envied DiCaprio's dual roles in the film, and says, 'He plays a dream role. He gets to be the villain and the hero in the same movie.'

Playing both the evil King Louis XIV and Philippe, the man in the iron mask, meant lessons in 17th-century etiquette for DiCaprio. And the character Philippe posed another challenge – wearing that mask. 'It definitely gets claustrophobic, and within 10 minutes of being in there, I could almost bash my head against a wall with frustration,' he says.

How to be a musketeer

On the other hand, DiCaprio clearly enjoyed mastering swordsmanship for the film. 'The sword fighting was great. I got to stand in a field and battle with big Johnny Malkovich.'

For Irons and Malkovich who play Musketeers Aramis and Athos, it was just a case of renewing old skills. Malkovich used a sword in other films such as Dangerous Liaisons (1988). Irons, who also had previous experience, says, 'I'd done some sword fighting a very long time ago. It's always nice to practice a skill again.'

Byrne reckons that d'Artagnan's outstanding reputation as an adept swordsman meant he didn't actually have to do a lot of sword fighting. 'It's just enough to show, in one or two very succinct movements, what he is capable of...'

The masked man

The real 'man in the iron mask' – his identity is still unknown – was arrested in 1669 with prison records documenting his death in 1703. The reason for the mask is probably the biggest clue to his identity. It was an age before mass media, when most communication was by word of mouth. Whoever wore the mask must have been extremely well-known, or resemble someone notable, otherwise why conceal his face?

Alexandre Dumas believed the masked man was the twin brother of King Louis XIV, imprisoned to avoid confusion over succession to the throne. He penned this theory in his novel The Man In The Iron Mask (1850) on which this film is based.

There are plenty of other speculations. Some say that the masked man was Molière, the famous playwright, who lost favour with the court. However Molière was a consumptive; for him to have died in 1703 would have meant he lived until the age of 83. Perhaps it was a servant who overheard too much, but in a time when statesmen were killed for only minor indiscretions, such a prisoner was unlikely to have been kept alive. Other theories suggest he was an illegitimate son of King Louis XIII, or the Queen's lover. Many names have arisen over the years to fit the mask, but whoever he was, his story will never cease to fascinate and inspire, since he rightly or wrongly stands for all silent victims of tyranny.

The Man In The Iron Mask* is showing on KrisVision Channel 4

Behind the moustaches from left to right: Jeremy Irons first made his name in the award-winning television series Brideshead Revisited (1982). He's next to appear in the controversial film, Lolita. Gerard Depardieu has been acting since the age of 16. The Man In The Iron Mask marks his 102nd film; others have included the award-winning Cyrano de Bergerac (1990) and his first English-language role Green Card (1990). John Malkovich has made a number of notable movies including Places In The Heart (1984), In The Line Of Fire (1993) and Portrait Of A Lady (1996). He has now formed his own film company.

Taking the technology with you

They're doing it on the road, in the air, in hotels 'til all hours. Actually, they're doing it just about anywhere. Whether it is putting together a last-minute presentation or updating a digital address book, today's hippest technology buffs are taking notebooks PCs, portable diaries and palmtops wherever they go. Rob Beattie looks at the best in travel technology

Technology has progressed by leaps and bounds since the days when computers were bulky, ugly, slow and office-only pieces of equipment. Even just a few years ago, portable PCs were unable to survive very far from the electricity supply, had low-quality screens, horrid keyboards, and pea-like processing power.

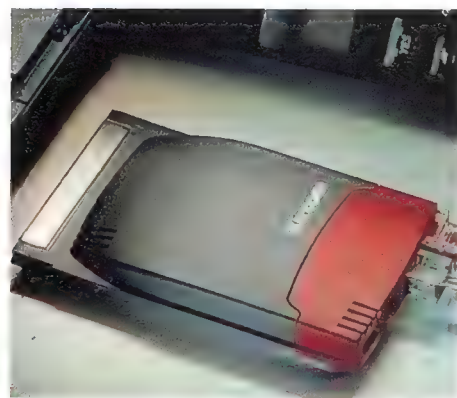

These days, notebook PCs are sexy little things. They can run all the popular software programs, send faxes, browse the Internet, send and receive e-mail with binary attachments such as audio files and images, and can run for hours without so much as a sniff of an electrical socket. Many of the large computer companies offer Mobile Pentium-based notebook PCs with multi-gigabyte drives capable of storing millions of documents and 24xspeed CD-ROM drives which can run multimedia encyclopaedias, travel guides, language tutors, games and movies. And of course, you can indulge your listening habits as well, although those notebooks fitted with wavetable synthesis chips sound more realistic than those with older, FM chips. And it's only getting better; Apple recently announced notebooks with a DVD (digital versatile disc) option which is capable of storing many times more than a traditional CD-ROM.

Screen technology has also gone for the sleek and slinky look, having settled around the TFT (thin film transistor) standard, which is able to support up to 1024x768 pixels with amazing clarity. The ramifications are astounding – you can reproduce animated graphics and video clips whether they're stored on the local hard disk, or being viewed from a Shockwave-enhanced web site.

Nowadays, all notebooks come with PC card slots which let you plug into the telephone network and communicate via a modem (56Kbps is the standard here) or hook into the office network. But look out for multifunction cards. Xircom, for example, makes a versatile PC card which can connect not just to the phone system, but to Ethernet-based office networks. And as for battery life, notebooks powered by lithium ion batteries are often better than nickel metal hydride (NiMH) ones which, however, are cheaper.

The software has become more sophisticated too. How's this for a scenario? You're on your way to a marketing presentation. On the plane, using Word you prepare a fax to your hosts to remind them about the Sharp projector you need. At the hotel, you recharge your notebook, hook into the hotel phone socket with your Xircom PC card, start the Netscape Navigator and collect your e-mail. There's Nothing to break, nothing to lose. The Xircom RealPort Ethernet 10/100+Modem 56 is the industry's first integrated PC card with an inbuilt connector system; if you want to connect your laptop to ethernet or the Internet, this is the business

Mobile processor chips range from 120 to 266 Mhz. The faster the processor, the better the performance

With most software applications almost doubling in size these days, it makes sense to invest in a large hard drive. Try to get a hard drive with at least a three gigabyte capacity a message from the office that explains that there is a mistake with the figures you were all set to use. You note the revisions and then make the changes to your presentation (which will include video footage and sound effects) using Microsoft PowerPoint. Finally, you send your two faxes with J-FAX software. Arriving at the venue the next day, you plug into their office network and print out your revised notes, then attach your notebook PC to the projector and give the presentation straight from that. Easy.

However, portable computing doesn't stop with notebook PCs. There's also a range of palmtop computers which go way beyond digital diaries. One of the better ones on the market at the moment is the Hewlett Packard 620LX which runs 'pocket' versions of Microsoft Windows (CE-version), Word, Excel and Internet Explorer. Like other CE-based palmtops, it opens like a book to reveal a screen and miniature typewriter-style keyboard. But unlike most, it also has a colour screen. Psion produces a rival to these CE machines

What has all the computing power you need, a full keyboard, touch-sensitive screen, 35 hours of battery life, weighs less than 360g and fits into your pocket?

Answer: the Psion Series 5 palmtop computer. It's an incredible piece of equipment; all applications are instantly available (no need to boot them up), it's compatible with most word processing and database packages, it can connect directly to an Apple Mac, most printers, and can even link with mobile phones, modems and the Internet

When it comes to screens, larger is certainly better. Most notebooks have a screen size of about 30mm, although there are some with a 35mm screen

The cost of the notebook may look very attractive, but before you buy, there are several things you should consider. Check how long the product warranty is valid and if upgrades are available. Choose a vendor who offers free telephone support for the life of the product

If you're travelling, make sure the battery gives independent power for several hours. Lithium ion ones afford hours of computing on the move called the Series 5, which has its own powerful word processor and spreadsheet, probably the best appointments diary, and an excellent keyboard. If you're a true trekkie, modern ones also include infra-red ports which allow their owners to electronically 'beam' information to each other. If you think even smaller is better, there's 3Com's PalmPilot organizer. This

If you're looking for flexibility in a palmtop, the Hewlett-Packard 620LX is the solution. It has a dedicated storage slot for a CompactFlash card, which leaves the PC card slot free for a modem connection, LAN connection or another memory card. In addition to the Windows applications, it has a high-contrast screen with 256 colours and a voice recorder with a built-in microphone literally fits in a shirt pocket. That's because it doesn't have a keyboard. Instead, the tiny device which is about the size of a deck of playing cards, lets you 'write' on the screen using a plastic pen. The PalmPilot then converts this into editable text which you can transfer to a PC back in the office to tidy up in a word processor.

And for the minimalist, there's the Rolodex Rex PC Companion. The size of a credit card and only twice as thick, this is the last word in portable diaries and address books. You type in all the information on a PC, plug in Rex (either on its own docking station or a standard PC card slot) and everything gets copied across. It's just a reference tool – there's no keyboard or pen – but it has a small, highly readable screen, and to fit all that technology into something the size of a credit card is extraordinary. Just don't get it confused with your Visa or MasterCard!

This is no ordinary handphone! With the Alcatel One Touch COM, you can store over 1000 data entries including addresses, messages and appointments. You can access Internet e-mail on it, synchronize with your PC, and of course, make telephone calls. Now that's a Smartphone!

How light can you go? The Siemens Nixdorf Mobile 510 has a basic weight of just under 2.0kg. Plus, for those presentations featuring full video motion, it has integrated MPEG and 16-bit stereo audio sound

If you're looking for a portable toy, the palm-size Hitachi MP-EG 1A digital video camera records video and encodes it instantly into MPEG-1 format for easy playback and even transfer over the Internet! All the image files are recorded on a Type III PCMCIA 260Mb hard disk which pops into most notebooks or laptops. The hard disk is re-usable and can store up to 20 minutes of video clips

The ThinkPad 600 is the latest laptop available from IBM. It has a large bright screen, spacious hard disk drive with 32Mb SDRAM, full docking capabilities, a front-loading bay that accepts a CD-ROM or floppy disk, and Pentium II mobile processors. It's the perfect balance between performance and portability

Turning the corner

British-Asian band, Cornershop, were all set to give up on the music scene when they hit the big time with Brimful Of Asha. For more than five years the band struggled in obscurity but now their eclectic mix of Eastern and Western music styles can be heard on radios all over the world.

By Hugh Ip

Oasis have hit the US – the lights go down and the fans are at the ready. Five silhouettes emerge from the back of the stage. The audience is whipped into a frenzy as the quintet known as Cornershop, the supporting act for the night, perform the strangely-titled Brimful Of Asha, a homage to Bollywood movie star Asha Bhosle. The year is 1998, the month is January, and things are looking up for the founding members of Cornershop, Tjinder Singh and Ben Ayres.

But things weren't always as easy as this. Let's rewind to the summer of 1992 when a small band called General Havoc literally wreaked havoc in the UK as one of the most inept bands of their generation. Even after changing their name to Cornershop and signing up with Wijja Records, things didn't get much better. One of Wijja's promoters cheekily went so far as to say that Cornershop were by far the worst band he had booked in years. Not the best of starts for a band who were one day to sink the Titanic by knocking Celine Dion off the UK number one slot.

By January 1993 Cornershop released their first single, In The Days Of Ford Cortina, which blended soothing melodies of the East with the grinding musical crunch of the West, creating an eclectic fusion of mind-spinning instrumentals. This mixture of sitar, flute and electric guitar was so unique that more gigs and some press interest followed and they released their next two EP's – Lock Stock & Double-Barrel and Readers' Wives. Their subsequent European tour is now legendary – Tjinder, his brother Avtar, Ben and two other band members travelled from country to country in an ice-cream van.

After their relatively successful tour, they quickly released their debut album, Hold On It Hurts, an idiosyncratic mix of Punjabi folk, 1960's funk, and hip-hop – a style which reflects Tjinder's and Avtar's Anglo-Asian roots. But the album was panned by the critics back home and Cornershop took to their ice-cream van to seek refuge on the European continent once again.

In 1995 after a lot of touring, some financial problems and a few disagreements, Avtar left the band to pursue a career in clothing design. Undeterred, the band released their second album, Woman's Gotta Have It, which triumphantly demonstrated the potential of Cornershop's imaginative approach to making music. The album was a success internationally and they got to play in New York's Central Park and various other US venues with the likes of Los Lobos, Stereolab and Porno For Pyros.

As touring came to an end, Cornershop settled back in the UK to record their next album, When I Was Born For The 7th Time. And reborn they were as the album received enormous international praise. Since then everything they touch turns to gold; their single Brimful Of Asha was a mega-hit in Europe, rock giants Oasis signed them up as a support band for their US tour, they were presented with LP Of The Year by US Spin magazine, and Rolling Stone awarded them a four-star album review – a rare achievement. Wiping their rocky past from their minds, vocalist/guitarist Singh, guitarist Ayres and fellow band members Nick Simms (drums), Anthony Saffery (sitar) and Peter Bengry (percussion) are delighted with their slow rise to stardom. Let us hope that they go on producing wise and inventive music for years to come. And if that fails, there's always selling ice-cream in Europe...

Cornershop can be heard on Hot Shots Channel 6

Did you know?

- Vocalist Tjinder Singh is a self-confessed record junkie and has a vast collection of music – with 95 per cent of his records found at rummage sales.
- On their latest album, When I Was Born For The 7th Time, Cornershop perform a cover of The Beatles' classic Norwegian Wood. However, what the album sleeve doesn't tell you is that it is sung in Punjabi. Sneaky.
- Before their recent success, Cornershop performed several times on tv and garnered a cult following which spawned a number of cover bands, notably the Cricklewood Cornershop.
- The name 'Cornershop' is a reference to the stereotypical image of British-Asians as small-shop owners, something Tjinder Singh, the child of immigrant-Asian parents brought up in a predominantly white area of the UK, successfully challenges with his music.

Shocking behaviour

As with every game, soccer has its so-called 'bad boys' – those players that cause penalties, make questionable plays, and ultimately give rise to heated commentary and debate. As some of these athletes head to the World Cup in France, David Pritchard finds out what incorrigible behaviour they've been up to

The hand of god moves in mysterious ways. One of the best examples of questionable plays was Argentina versus England in the quarter-finals of the World Cup in Mexico in 1986. The game was scoreless when Steve Hodge hooked the ball back to his goalkeeper, Peter Shilton. The England keeper came out to collect the pass only to be beaten to the ball by the Argentinian striker, Diego Maradona. Two bounces later and the ball was in the net, Maradona was celebrating and England was furious. How had the diminutive striker managed to beat a massive goalkeeper to the high ball? After the game, which Argentina won 2-1, Maradona would admit no wrongdoing; he explained that the controversial goal was due to 'the hand of god' and no more.

The mercurial soccer superstar was no stranger to World Cup controversy. Although Maradona was considered too young to be selected for the victorious Argentinian squad in 1978, he left his mark on the 1982 tournament. Frustrated by the persistent Brazilian defence, Maradona lashed out, was sent off and Argentina's defence of their trophy was at an end.

While Maradona's performances gave the world plenty to discuss and debate, the World Cup finals in France this summer are sure to provide a number of questionable plays and players. Some of soccer's so-called troublemakers will be on the pitch and who knows what antics they, or their team, might get up to.

To start, there's Cameroon, nicknamed the 'Indomitable Lions'. This is the team that in 1990 took on Argentina's star player, the Flying Canigga. Cameroon players surrounded him, making reckless limb-threatening assaults. But the Lions could be muscled out of the World Cup this year by a combination of Bulgaria and Croatia.

Both these Balkan sides have highly-motivated captains. Hristo Stoichkov of Bulgaria has had plenty of cards from the Spanish Referees' Association, but after stomping on one member's foot, Christmas cards were not among them. His Croatian counterpart, Zvonimir Boban became a legend, although not for his performance in a Yugoslavian league game. He took on a Serbian policeman who seemed to be stretching his authority too far over the Croatian fans.

Pandering to supporters is not necessarily a part of Stefan Effenberg's expertise. The German midfielder player was the driving force in his country's 1994 World Cup bid in the US. This is the man whose favourite means of relaxation is 'to sit down with a glass of white wine and a video of my performance. I cannot believe how well I play.'

However, German fans begged to differ and their chorus of disapproval was met with a rather offensive hand gesture from Effenberg. This got him banned from the rest of the tournament and he has not represented his country since.

This shouldn't be a problem for Alessandro Costacurta. The defender for AC Milan Central is one of the best and a regular in the Italian line-up. Unless he's suspended of course. In 1994, FIFA's (Federation Internationale de Football Association) strict disciplinary procedures on penalties led to Costacurta missing both the European Cup final and the World Cup final.

Whatever the technicalities surrounding professional fouls, Saudi Arabia's midfield star Said Owiaran seems to have fallen foul of his country's moral code. For reasons which remain shrouded in mystery and seem to have something to do with his private life, he will not be performing in France this year. Maybe it's for the same reason Romanian striker Marius Lacatus was reprimanded by his team – he was caught smoking during a training session in 1990!

Some Argentinian players may not make it to France '98 because of their grooming habits. Their coach is Daniel Passarella, who captained Argentina to a 1978 World Cup victory with a team that included the strikers Luque and Kempes, both of whom had hair long enough to qualify for entry into a heavy-metal rock band. But now that Passarella is in charge, he has decreed that he will not select players with long hair or earrings. In a move that sent shudders through teenagers the world over, Gabriel Batistuta and Redondo were told to cut their hair if they wanted to play for their country.

An experienced player like Passarella should know that there will be a lot worse behaviour at France's World Cup than a bit of headbanging. Unless it's forehead to forehead, of course.

Arabian Knight

70 minutes
Director Richard Williams
Voices Matthew Broderick, Jennifer Beals
Language English

About 30 years ago, animator Williams (Who Framed Roger Rabbit) had an idea for a full-length animated adventure about a Thief And A Cobbler, one of the film's many working titles. He could never have known how many revisions and years it would take to achieve his dream, finally titled Arabian Knight. The film is about Tack, a young cobbler living in a Middle Eastern city, who falls in love with a princess. Many have called it an imitation of Disney's Aladdin, yet because Williams began his project in 1969, the reverse is more likely to be the truth.

Antoine Riviere is a psychotherapist who earns a comfortable living. Everything would be perfect if he hadn't taken Edouard Berg on as a patient. When Berg claims he has killed his wife, Antoine doesn't know whether he's treating a compulsive liar or a killer. Antoine Riviere est psychotherapeute qui mène une vie aisée. Tout serait parfait s'il n'avait jamais rencontré son client Edouard Berg. Quand Berg prétend qu'il a tué sa femme, Antoine ne sait pas s'il s'agit d'un menteur invétéré ou d'un tueur.

The Replacement Killers

88 minutes
Director Antoine Fuqua
Starring Chow Yun-Fat, Mira Sorvino
Languages English, 日本語
Subtitles 华文字幕

With John Woo as executive producer, Chow in his first US film, Fuqua directing and Mighty Aphrodite's Sorvino starring, this film truly fuses the best of Asian and American film-making. Chow plays Chinese immigrant John Lee whose violent past as a professional killer catches up with him. In exchange for his family's safety, Lee is forced by the evil Mr Wei, to carry out an assassination.

Warning: This edited film may still contain violence which some passengers may find objectionable

Spice World

92 minutes
Director Bob Spiers
Starring The Spice Girls
Languages English, Deutsch
Subtitles English

Being at the bottom of a deep hole for the past five years is probably the only excuse for not knowing who The Spice Girls are. Their movie debut is not exactly The Beatles' A Hard Day's Night, but it's along those lines. It features their funkiest songs and lots of fun. The support cast is amazing; Richard E Grant, Roger Moore, Richard Briers, Elton John and Bob Geldof all make appearances.

Warning: This film contains language and sexual content which some passengers may find objectionable

CHANNEL 7
Drama

The Apostle

133 minutes
Director Robert Duvall
Starring Robert Duvall, Farrah Fawcett
Language English

Duvall is one of the great actors of our time, with a string of credits including The Godfather and his Oscar-winning Tender Mercies. Now he both stars in and directs The Apostle, the story of a colourful Pentecostal preacher, whose jealousy results in him having to leave his wife (Fawcett) and the congregation he loves. He relocates to a Louisiana hamlet, where he works to rebuild his flock. Duvall revels in the role of the preacher, delivering passionate sermons and raising the hopes and souls of all who hear him.

The Wedding Singer

95 minutes
Director Frank Coraci
Starring Adam Sandler, Drew Barrymore
Language English

Comedian Sandler (Happy Gilmore, tv's Saturday Night Live) stars as Robbie, a would-be songwriter who earns a living singing at weddings. The year is 1985, and Robbie is due to get married. However, what should be the happiest day of his life turns into a disaster, and afterwards he becomes the most obnoxious wedding singer you could ever imagine. One of the best things about the film is its 1980's soundtrack, with songs including White Wedding (performed by Billy Idol) and the Miami Vice Theme.

Moonstone
120 minutes

Curses. Aren't they great? What else provides such mystery and intrigue wrapped up in beliefs and traditions? In this period drama, the moonstone is a sacred diamond. Supposedly, any person who steals the gem is cursed and someone did steal it – John Herncastle, in 1799. When he dies, he bequeaths the jewel to his niece Rachel, who subsequently starts acting rather strangely. And then the diamond goes missing again!

Shark Hunt

11 minutes

There's a reason they call them 'loan sharks'. And Gary's a good one; he won't tolerate non-payers. But one of his debtors seems to disagree with him.

The Nanny

CHANNEL 16 Comedy The Drew Carey Show

23 minutes

The Drew Carey Show is set in a small, Midwestern town in the US. And you know the kind of people that come out of those places – The X-Files details that stuff all the time! In this episode, Drew discovers at his school reunion that his former band teacher had some disturbing after-hours habits.

The Nanny

23 minutes

In this popular comedy, Fran is a nanny who works for a wealthy family. Audiences seem to love her nasal, New York accent. For 25 years, she has been corresponding with a pen pal named Lenny and they've never met. Now he's heading for a visit and Fran's getting a bit nervous.

Happy Belly

23 minutes

Comic chaos is usually the soup du jour in this programme set in a restaurant. Owner Johnny Neo is always looking to cut corners, while waiter Ming constantly offends the chef by tweaking his recipes. And then there's the kitchen help, Eldon and Antonio, who aren't much help at all!

Suddenly Susan

23 minutes

Former model Brooke Shields (who's married to tennis champ Andre Agassi in real life) plays Susan, a magazine writer. In this episode, Susan convinces her boss to hire a sweet old lady named Midge to help in the office. Unfortunately, Midge is a bit clumsy and Susan's work starts to suffer some bizarre consequences.

Goodness Gracious Me

29 minutes

A British-Asian comedy sketch show based on the Sony Award-winning radio series. Highly amusing stuff!

Born To Be Wild With Martin Clunes

59 minutes

Comedian and man-behaving-badly, Martin Clunes offers his services in helping to release a tame elephant into the wilds of Tanzania, Africa. A patron of the Born Free Foundation, Clunes says, 'I've always loved animals but I've no special knowledge.' Maybe he should've started with a kitten?

Invention

21 minutes

Aren't inventions great? I mean, where would we be without espresso machines? In this episode of the fascinating show, we learn about the beginnings of the clockwork radio, and – get this – singing, talking, blinking trainers! Good stuff.

Raging Planet: Lightning

52 minutes

This incredible programme travels the world to show us the beauty and power of our planet's natural phenomena. The focus this time is lightning. Did you know that on any given day there are 1800 active thunderstorms across the face of the earth? Shocking!

CHANNEL 18 Current affairs Inside The Internet

50 minutes

What started as a military information system has turned into this century's most amazing innovation – the internet. Inside talks to the inventor of the World Wide Web, as well as some of those nasty little hackers.

Shooting Versace

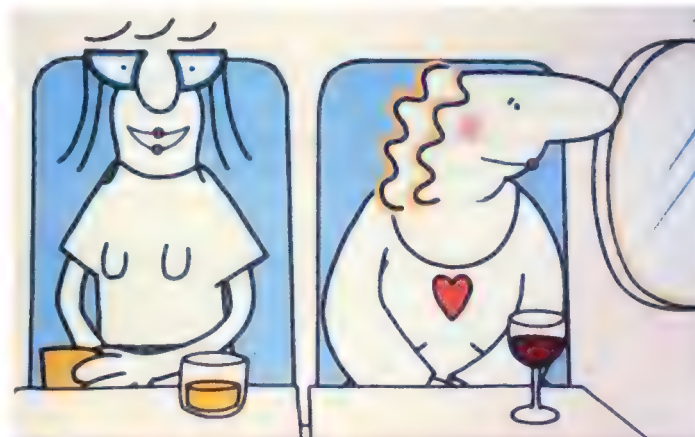

50 minutes

Even before the coffin had settled in the ground, people were rushing to make a movie on legendary designer Gianni Versace's life and dramatic death. This behind-the-scenes look at the making of The Versace Murder is a revealing portrait of the tensions of low-budget film-making.

Correspondent Magazine

28 minutes

In this episode, there's a report from France on a secret gastronomic tradition and the correspondent from Vienna trails a young man who travels around the city distributing samples of his poetry. And in Iceland, a New Age community is springing up in the shadows of the Snaefells mountains.

Action

Hagane

As Hagane, you have the incredible power of a ninja and the speed of a human cyborg. You venture into the Kokura faction's territory to seek revenge and to recover the Holy Grail, which is said to possess the power to destroy the world. The game is divided into five stages. You must destroy the boss at the end of each stage in order to advance to the next stage.

How to play

Control pad left to move left, right to move right, down to squat
Select select weapon
Start start/pause the game
A button use ninja art
B button jump
X button select weapon
Y button attack
L button back flip
R button rotate forward

Hints

Try to pick up certain items along the way to restore your energy. These items appear when certain enemies and obstacles are destroyed. Use your special attack by pressing the R and B/Y buttons.

F-Zero®

F-Zero allows you to drive to the limit in a futuristic racing game. You can choose either to ride solo, as in a practice run, or to race in the Grand Prix against computer rivals. Use your skills to survive.

How to play

Control pad move cursor/change vehicle's direction
Select move cursor on selection screen
Start pause/confirm selection
A button super jet (turbo)
B button throttle (acceleration)
X/Y button brake
L button lean left
R button lean right

Hints

The 15 different tracks feature different obstacles and hazards. The use of Super Jet (Turbo) is not allowed in the first lap and you can only use it once each lap (up to a maximum of three times in each race).

Super Bonk™

Bonk's enemy, King Drool, gave him a poisonous drink. When he awoke, his cave had been transported by time machine to King Drool's whacked-out, modern world. Help Bonk defeat King Drool and return to his world.

How to play

Control pad move bonk
Select not used
Start start/pause the game
A button not used
B button jump
X button release special attack when available
Y button head butt/fire shot
L button not used
R button not used

Hints

Sometimes it's useful to be Big Bonk and sometimes Little Bonk or Crab Bonk in order to get through a passage. To transform Bonk, locate the coloured candies. You can make Bonk jump higher by landing him on the Yellow Spring Flower and pressing the B button at the right moment. Collect items along the way to gain points and to restore Bonk's power.

Hal's Hole In One Golf

In Hal's Hole In One Golf you can compete against 60 different computer opponents. There are six different modes: Stroke Play (best overall score for 18 holes wins), Match Player (two-player), Tournament Play (up to four players), Vs Hal (play against computer), Practice and Memory Play. There are three difficulty levels to choose from: amateur, single and professional.

How to play

Control pad: left/right aim shot left or right/adjust stance
Control pad: up/down select clubs/move selection box up or down
Select show player standings when in tournament mode
Start show score
A/B button start swing/select power/select ball direction/confirm selection
X/Y button cancel selection/go to previous screen
L button aim slightly left
R button aim slightly right

Hints

After selecting your game mode, enter your name and then select your clubs. When you are satisfied, select 'OK' from the screen to continue. During game play, choose 'SHOT' mode to tee off, 'GREEN' mode to view the green from overhead or 'HOLE' mode to view the terrain in 3-D. To hit a ball, you need to press the A or B button three times in quick succession. Press A or B button once to initiate swing, press again during the upswing to determine the power of the shot (red zone is the strongest) and finally, when the downswing indicator reaches the blue zone, hit A or B button to connect squarely with the ball. Press A or B button twice for putting and just push once for a tip-in. To end game, press MODE key on the handset.

Kirby's Dream Course™

Take the rules of golf and apply them to a surrealistic, floating course full of geometric obstacles, weird traps and hair-raising hazards. The aim of the game is to sink the ball into the cup in the fewest number of strokes possible. You have a certain number of balls to make each shot, and when you're out of balls, your game is over. You lose a ball for each stroke that doesn't go in, or for hitting the ball out of bounds. A variety of special obstacles can be used to your advantage or disadvantage, depending on how you play.

How to play

Control pad: left/right move pencil/shot guideline or aim shot
Control pad: up/down select option/move pencil (name entry screen)/lower or raise elevation of shot guide
Select change selection
Start confirm selection/call different information window
A button confirm selection/write with pencil/stop meter in shot control

Sport

Super Tennis

You can choose to play singles, doubles or try for the number one ranking in the world circuit. The eight tournaments in the circuit are played on different court types – hard, lawn or clay. Each surface has a different effect on the ball.

How to play

Control pad move player/move cursor/change ball direction (see hints)
Select press before service to view score
Start press before service to view score
A button confirm selection/start new game/toss the ball to serve/slow slice/light volley
B button confirm selection/start new game/toss the ball to serve/quick serve/strong volley
X button top spin
Y button lob
L button left spin
R button right spin

Hints

When you hit the ball (using A or B button), you can add spin to it by pressing either L or R button at the same time. You can also change the direction of your shots by using the control pad.

By: Nintendo® 1991 Tokyo Shoseki © 1991 Nintendo

B button confirm selection/write with pencil/free scroll to view entire course
X button cancel selection/erase pencil/view score card
Y button cancel selection/erase pencil/extend shot guideline

Hints

If you hit four bonus characters, you will go to a bonus level. In this level, try to hit as many bonus characters as possible in the time limit. The more you hit, the more strokes will be subtracted from your score.

SportSuper Soccer

A soccer simulation in which you can play the game from an 'on the field' perspective. You may play in a tournament, in a single game or a one-on-one shoot out. There is a password feature that saves your position in the tournament. Just as in real soccer, you can get penalized, injured, or thrown out of the game. You have the option to make a team line-up change at the beginning of the game or if an injury should occur.

How to play

Control pad moves your player/moves cursor on the menu screens

Control pad: left/right cycles through pass receivers

Select pause

Start starts game

A button soft forward kick

B button shoot (hard kick)/slide kicks when on the defence/enters selection menu screens

Y button pass/body blocks when on defence

Hints

In the tournament mode, you select your country to represent and you begin play against the first team of the tournament. You cannot move to the next game until you win a game. After winning a game, you will receive a password that allows you to continue from that point next time you play should you decide to turn your game off.

ActionSuper Adventure Island™

You play as Master Higgins as he protects the inhabitants of Adventure Island from the many deadly creatures controlled by Dark Cloak. Jeanie Jungle, Master Higgins' girlfriend, was turned to stone by Dark Cloak. There are five areas on Adventure Island, with four stages each.

How to play

Control pad left/right – move left or right, down – hold to super jump, up – hold when jumping to jump high

Start start/pause

A or Y button throw weapon

B or X button jump/swim

Hints

Gather fruit and milk to rebuild your health. There are two weapons you can use, an axe and a boomerang. You can collect up to four of one weapon but not both. The fourth weapon is the 'fire' weapon and can destroy rocks. When you hear a tingling sound, jump to make a star appear. This takes you to the bonus round.

ActionSuper Mario World®

Mario and Luigi meet their new friend Yoshi in this enormously popular Mario quest to save a land of dinosaurs from the King of the Koops. Use the brothers' new powers and Yoshi's monster-gobbling appetite as you explore 96 levels filled with nasty creatures and traps.

How to play

Control pad move Mario/move map/move cursor

Select drop reserve item from top of screen/change selection

Start start/pause/enter selection

A button spin jump/jump off Yoshi

B button jump/swim/enter selection/fly (with Yoshi) or float (with cape)

X button same as Y button

Y button turbo run/hold object/punch (on fence)/fly (with cape)/eat (with Yoshi)/cancel/throw fireball

L button scroll some action screens left

R button scroll some action screens right

Hints

Along the way, you can pick up special items to increase Mario's power. Cape Feather allows Mario to fly and float, and Fire Flower allows Mario to shoot fireballs. Gather 100 regular coins and you'll earn an extra Mario.

NewsGoing for gold

Nintendo 64 players can experience the Midas touch with the launch of the limited edition, gold coloured hand controller. It is only available as part of the Nintendo 64 bundle. But don't despair, all you gamers who already have the console but want to add a bit of colour to your play, can buy a new game pad from the range of colours already available – red, yellow, green, blue, black and grey.

Going underground

Everyone's favourite blue mascot Sonic is coming back in an all-new adventure – Sonic Underground. The heroic hedgehog is to star alongside his long-lost twin brother Manic and his sister Sonia. Can't wait for this one!

Game Boy action

Look out for two new Game Boy games: Pocket Bomberman brings the cult bomb-'em-up action to the small screen and Wario Land 2 sees the return of the bad guy in an all-new adventure.

Fashion & Fun

Nintendo have announced that 1000 US Tommy Hilfiger stores are to feature permanent Nintendo 64 kiosks featuring all the latest games.

Yoshi's lost world

Yoshi, one of the craziest characters ever to grace a video game, returns with his very own adventure for the Nintendo 64 – Yoshi's Story. The ever-hungry dinosaur has to munch his way through six chapters of bananas, apples, melons and baddies to win the day and free his island from the evil Baby Bowser.

Shining Saturn

Sega has a whole host of new games due for release including Shining Force 3 for the Saturn, and, just in time for the World Cup, Worldwide Soccer II for PC.

Nintendo facts

- Over 60 million Game Boys have been sold worldwide since 1989.
- Around 40 per cent of Game Boy users are girls.

KrisNews

What's happening in the world of politics today? Is the NIKKEI up or the Dow Jones down? And more importantly, did your favourite soccer team win that game? For those who feel that time spent in the air and crossing time zones leave them feeling out of touch, the Singapore Airlines' news service provides an invaluable link to the real world.

This facility provides an on-screen, text-based, Reuters' world news service which is updated hourly by satellite. Covering general, financial and sports news, the service can be accessed through the KrisWorld entertainment system and is provided free of charge. Now there's no need to lose touch with what's happening on the ground.

Destination videos

New York – one of the destination city videos

As part of the Singapore Airlines onboard entertainment, the destination videos are a great way to get more information on your destination city.

Almost everything you need to know is contained within the videos. There's information on getting from the airport to your hotel, immigration and customs procedures, various modes of ground transportation, car hire and hotel reservations. Plus there is a host of other services that are available to help you. It's also a way to see a bit of the city before you even get there!

Videos are shown for Singapore, Frankfurt, Los Angeles, Hong Kong, San Francisco, New York, Tokyo, Taipei, London and Sydney. They will be screened on Channel 21 prior to landing at the respective airports

Singapore Airlines' destination videos give you all the information you need. Whether it's getting from the airport to your hotel, or immigration and customs procedures, the videos are a fantastic source of information

The Singapore Destination video includes a fascinating preview of some of the city's best-known attractions. It also introduces you to the multi-racial community with its dazzling festivals and diverse local cuisines.

Included in the video are some of the lively events taking place on this tropical island. This month, the Festival of Arts, which runs until the end of June, showcases the works of local and international artists. Plus there are performances by musicians and orchestras from all over the world.

Another event featured this month on the Singapore Destination video is the Food Festival. Besides eating all the fantastic culinary dishes, you can attend wine tastings or futuristic Agro Farm Tours.

And then there's the Great Singapore Sale. The city is one of the premier shopping destinations, and during the Sale, it's a bonanza of discounts on designer fashion.

Watch the Singapore Destination video for further details on these events plus much more.

New York lives up to its reputation. Every street you walk down, every corner you pause at, looks like a movie set. There's so much you'll recognize – what's amazing is that it is real and not just a stage set!

London's no longer all smog and gas lamps; it's a thriving cosmopolitan city with a lot of history.

Hong Kong is a busy, crowded, colourful and exotic city. Built on a series of islands and reclaimed land, space is a premium, and Hong Kong is a fascinating mixture of ancient and modern traditions.

Set on the banks of the river Main in Germany, Frankfurt is an important hub for the European economy. Modern and open-minded, historically rooted and dignified, it is at once pleasant, professional, generous and fun.

Set in the northern part of Taiwan, Taipei is surrounded by spectacular mountains. It is a city where ancient and modern cultures co-exist. Where there were once rice paddies, there are now modern office buildings but Taipei still has strong ties with its traditions.

Tokyo is a huge, crowded, modern metropolis which 12 million people call home. It is also a city of contrast, from traditional Buddhist temples and Shinto shrines to the high-tech Tokyo Tower.

Surprising to some, Sydney is not Australia's capital (that's Canberra), but it is the country's oldest settlement and its economic powerhouse.

A land of fantasy, Los Angeles is probably best known for giving us Hollywood and Disneyland. With its almost perfect year-round weather, the city is the place to hone your tan or surf.

San Francisco was formed in the Gold Rush days. Its steep city streets allow for perfect viewing of the gorgeous modern and Victorian-style buildings, the Pacific Ocean, San Francisco Bay and spooky Alcatraz Island Prison.

Destination information

A truly useful element of the KrisWorld entertainment system, Singapore Airlines' Destination Information provides up-to-date, on-screen information on a majority of destination cities. Grouped by region, there is useful information on how to get to town from the airport as well as places to stay for each location. There are restaurants and sites to visit, complete with entrance prices and opening hours. In addition, there's a list of major events – no guide book can offer such up-to-date details. It can be surprisingly useful, even on the way home.

Merrill Lynch
on the fine art
of commitment.

What does it take to guide the world through markets whose boundless potential is accompanied by daunting complexities? Certainly more than a mere presence in Asia. It requires a firm commitment to the region. The dedication to acquiring knowledge by entering markets early. And maintaining it by remaining through good times and bad. To gaining keen insight through dedicated research. And transforming unique perspectives into wisdom for creative, and successful, solutions. Our commitment is an art. Practiced and perfected over more than 30 years of dedication to Asia. It's a difference proven through time. And one which will continue long into the future.

The difference is Merrill Lynch.
